

Family Planning protects the environment

More hungry people.

More working people.

More consuming people.

Dwindling fish stock. Low rice yield.
Threatened water supply.
More demand, more forests and marine resources destroyed.

We balance family planning efforts with environmental conservation because the future hangs in this balance.

Conservation International

Office of Population, Health and Nutrition

